Come with me to ??? In July charged, what some thought exorbitant corkage-R45 a bottle, for wine bought on the Estate. I sent Millhouse Kitchen an email, also tried to highlight our plight on a Facebook page (which I've recently joined) called Cape Town Restaurants the Good, Bad and Nastyyyyy (which incidentally had 110 hits - negative and positive comments).

End result the answer from Millhouse was as follows -We understand your confusion, the restaurant and wine cellar are two separate businesses and privately owned.

The only negative which we experienced was that the Millhouse Kitchen

So, as a suggestion "Confirm the corkage before opening the wine!" I was also charged 12.5% service charge Is this where I'm heading? Hope it's not going to become "The Norm"

Where have all the Boeremeisies Gone!

Come on our trip in August and meet Elsabe du Plessis who, once her 5 children had left home, found herself with 'time on her hands'! She started making jam and now has a mini industry operating out of her son's wine estate in Wellington (Imbuko). We will do a jam tasting of her Pinotage/Merlot/Cabinet Sauvignon Jams!

Lunch will be in Paarl at a restaurant in an old Blacksmith's Cottage—called the Blacksmith's Kitchen. We recently enjoyed such a lovely lunch at this restaurant on Pearl Mountain.

A POINT TO PONDER

Of late I am being faced with a dilemma!

I always have to give numbers to restaurants by the Monday before our Thursday trip!

In the past most restaurants have not been perturbed and have NOT CHARGED me for meals booked and not eaten. I guess with the present economy this is changing!! If you book - pay - and do not come on the trip

I'm afraid I can no longer give you a refund!
